ABSTRACT

A standardized framework for adaptors is provided by a configuration user interface module that receives configuration descriptive data in a hierarchical file format and a metadata utility that receives communication format data in a hierarchical file format. An adaptor-specific interface is generated from the configuration descriptive data may collect instance-specific configuration information. The information is stored as an XML file.